It forms also a kind of popular Club, and at times a species of tribunal. It is there that all the gossip of the day is communicated from one Chinaman to another; and there, too, are settled a variety of disputes, which they do not care to take to the Famure for fear of being uselessly squeezed and bullied. The Chinese are perhaps the greatest gossips in the whole world. They have a fund of small talk that is never exhausted, and would excite the envy of a veteran tittle tattler at home.
